Coalition to Promote Research

Organizations Committed to Promoting Public Health, Innovation and Fundamental Knowledge Through Scientific Research

Membership

The Coalition to Promote Research (CPR) is a coalition of national organizations committed to promoting public health, innovation, and fundamental knowledge through scientific research. The organizations represent hundreds of thousands of scientists, physicians, health care providers, and patients who support federal investments in basic and applied biomedical and behavioral research.

If your organization is interested in joining the CPR, please provide the contact information requested below and email the information back to Angela Sharpe at cpr@coossa.org.
